in the course of the australian federal election, labor sought to capitalise on widespread opposition to the war in iraq by promising to withdraw 550 australian combat troops